

Aero Lab Moves Headquarters To Torrance

Associated Aero Science Laboratories, Inc., a 10-year-old technology-based Hawthorne firm, will move its headquarters facility to Torrance this month, according to announcement by John E. Leadbetter, president.

Some 65 personnel will accompany the move, Mr. Leadbetter disclosed. New headquarters will be at 2430 Amsler, in the industrial tract off Crenshaw Blvd. and Pacific Coast Highway, near Torrance Municipal Airport. Approximately 8500 square feet have been leased for occupancy by the company's corporate offices, an ultra-modern computer center, and a publications facility.

Previously the firm's Hawthorne operations were divided in two buildings, at 250 South Prairie and at 207 South Prairie. City street improvement plans for widening Prairie Avenue make it necessary to vacate the buildings, Mr. Leadbetter said.

"This new site offers us the combination of suitable characteristics which we felt were needed," Mr. Leadbetter said. "It is relatively new and provides the room needed for our present plateau of growth. We are looking forward to a long and mutually advantageous relationship with this community."

Associated Aero also has facilities at Ridgecrest, California, near the Naval Ordnance Test Station, and at San Clemente Island. A division, Associated Aero of Alabama, is situated at Huntsville, Alabama, and performs work for the Army Ballistic Missile Center and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The company employs a total of about 300 at all facilities. Principal projects include gathering and processing data from various military and space projects, publications and technical training work.

Associated Aero's commercial computer division does commercial accounting for many clients in the South Bay area. Among work done is payroll handling, cost accounting, inventory control and other varied commercial tasks for South Bay industry, commerce and the professions.

"Our commercial accounting clients are of all sizes," says Mr. Leadbetter. "Hospitals, construction firms, financial institutions and others find that our automated system can save them time and money on many types of accounting programs."
